ARCHITECT FACILITATOR

Facilitator: By embodying this role the architect is not directly a problem solver, as architecture is often understood outside of PID, but is instead the facilitator of problem solving (Ballinger & D. Silva 2020:87, Kim 2018:89, Pasel & Skambas 2020:70, Straus and Doyle 1978).

PLAY SCAPE

GATHERING

POINT OF RITUAL

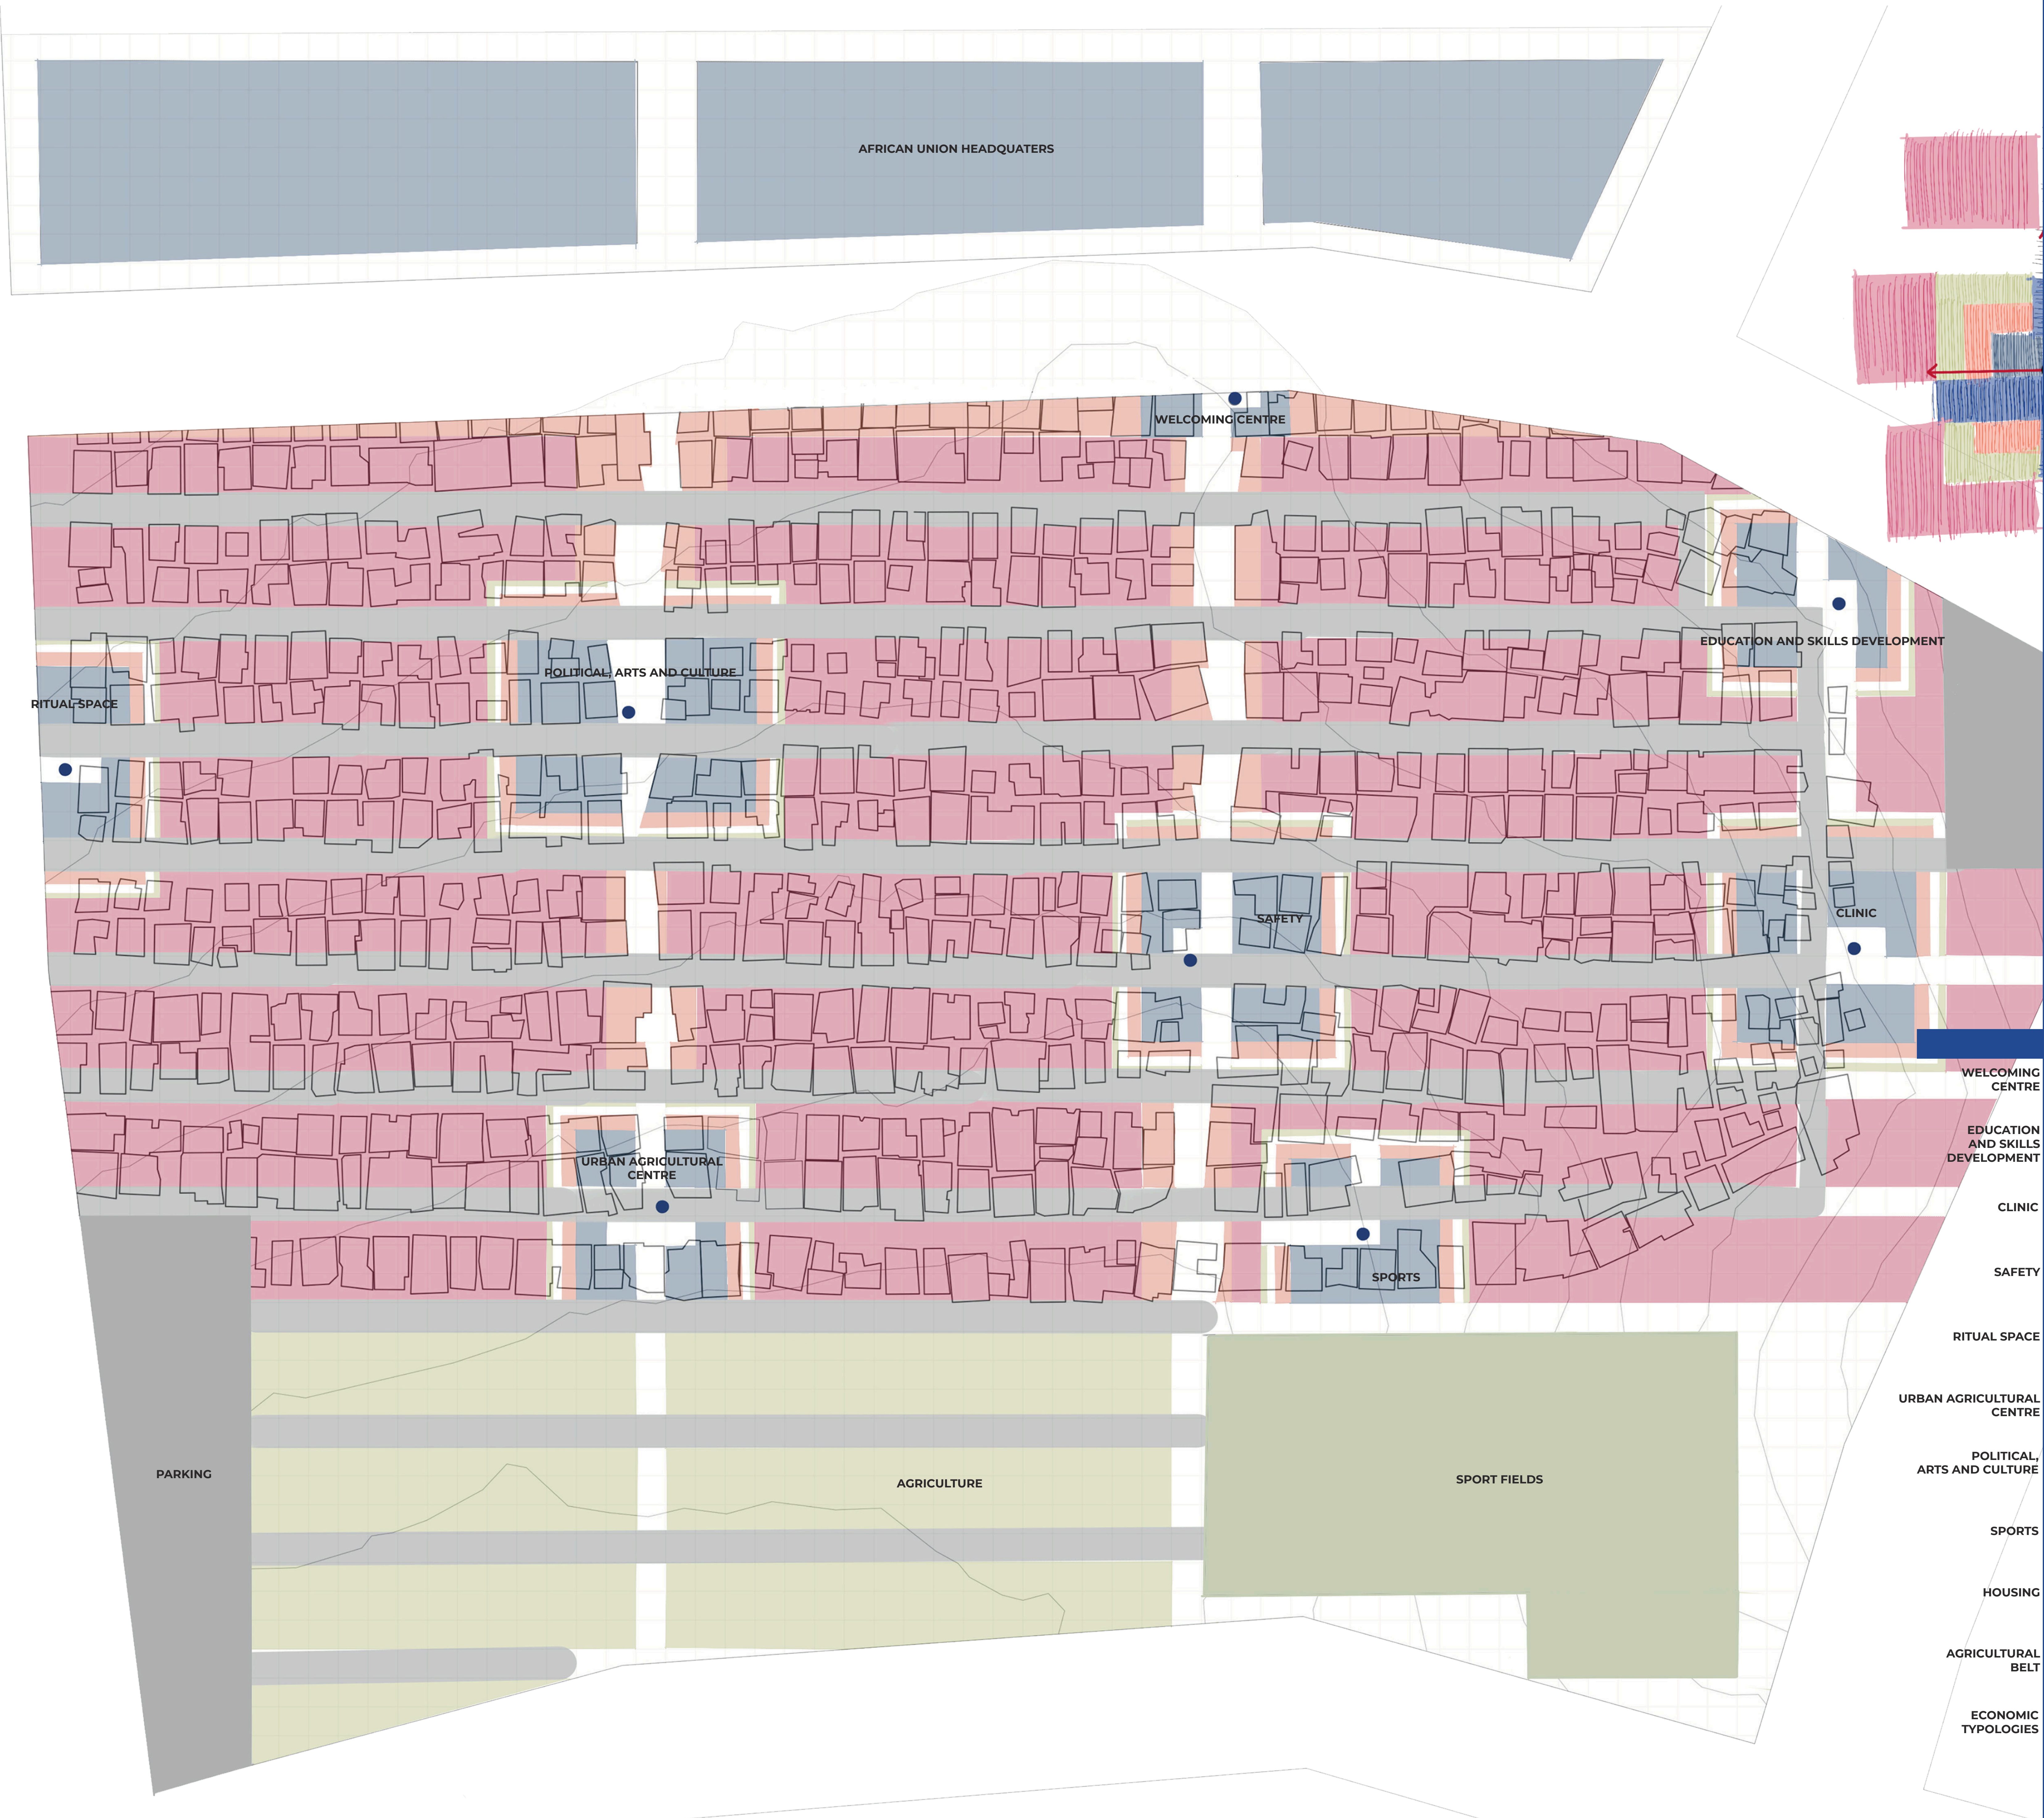

A diagram showing a central circle surrounded by three concentric circles. The area between the circles is filled with small red dots, representing a gathering. The text "GATHERING AROUND WATER TANKS" is written above the diagram. To the right of the diagram is a vertical rectangle, and below it is a horizontal rectangle, both with dashed lines indicating they are to be cut out.

A diagram showing a cross-section of a piston inside a cylinder. Two horizontal lines represent the cylinder walls. A shaded rectangular piston is at the bottom. Three curved arrows point downwards towards the top surface of the piston, representing the pressure exerted by the gas above it.
